Dear Valued Customer,

As you know, COVID-19 (coronavirus) and the fallout therefrom have created global supply shortages, especially in the automotive, truck, and aerospace industries. This pandemic and its effects have placed various businesses, including auto, truck, and aerospace suppliers like Flexfab, in extraordinarily difficult circumstances.

The situation remains serious globally, in the US, and in Michigan. The health and safety of our team members and supporting our customers and suppliers will continue to be our top priorities. While Flexfab does now have the ability to operate as various governmental orders and regulations have subsided, obtaining raw materials and parts has become practically impossible, as well as finding new associates.

Our NA and overseas manufacturing sites are at full capacity on all shifts as we struggle to have sufficient personnel and raw material to support current customer requirements. Furthermore, we still experience certain product shortages related to ongoing COVID-19 impacts and the current global logistics crisis at some of our overseas suppliers.

Customers are being notified as they are impacted. Please contact your customer service representative for updated lead times and any other questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Bruno Bortali
Sr. Global Business Director
